2. Organizational Procedures, Missions and Objectives

- 1) Organizational structure: RSN has a general assembly consisting of development experts and volunteers. General assembly elects the executive committee (EC) in every two years. The EC nominates advisors for the organization. RSN has regional/ district or project offices/ programmes across the country. The project volunteers report to their respective field offices. The EC and auditors present their progress and financial reports, respectively, in the general assembly.
- 2) Vision: RSN envisions a Nepalese society where all people enjoy opportunities for their progress with justice, equality, peace and prosperity. Appropriate institutions would be in place to create a prosperous, just and forward looking society.
- 3) Mission: RSN mission is to develop the entrepreneurship and self-governing institutions for improving the lives of the rural poor, particularly women, small farmers, oppressed communities and ethnic minorities, and bring about their socio-economic empowerment.
- 4) Aims: RSN aims to empower the people so that they can attain self-reliance and confidence for long-term sustainable development. It strives to release the people's boundless potentials for enhancing their productive and organizing abilities for their own development. RSN initiates the activities to empower peoples' organizations as core activity, which is integrated and community based.
- 5) Objectives: The specific objectives of RSN are as follows:
 - i. Conceptualize, develop, execute and evaluate income generating livelihood programmes.
 - ii. Create awareness in the diverse sectors such as education, environment, human rights, self-governance, resource mobilization, micro-finance, gender parity, and health issues with special focus to the HIV/ AIDS and mother-child health.
 - iii. Implement the development projects on sustainable agriculture, food security, community based social and agro-forestry, livestock production, safe drinking water, renewable energy, irrigation, institutional development, entrepreneurship and rural infrastructures.
 - iv. Work with the local people to evolve new organizations and strengthen the existing ones so that the self-organization, self-governance and self-reliance are promoted.
 - v. Promote the indigenous knowledge, skills and resources to strengthen the process of self-development, conservation of natural resources, environment and bio-diversity.
 - vi. Advocate lobby and form networks at the local, national and international levels for the great cause of people.
 - vii. Conduct the training, workshops, seminars and develop the human resources.
 - viii. Carry out the action-research on socio-economic conditions and other aspects of community.

- ix. Carry out the evaluation/ studies of development projects, programmes, models and approaches.
 - x. Disseminate the issue-based information pertaining to contemporary national concerns, sustainable development, democracy, human rights, gender, bonded labour, health effects and impacts of agro-chemicals. And
 - xi. Publish the people-oriented, IEC-materials (information, education and communication) and periodic bulletins for mass education.
- 6) Approach: RSN has adopted the principles of integrated development to maximize the benefits from the complimentary relations and synergy effects. Its development activities synthesize the following major components:
- i. Livelihood and micro-enterprises,
 - ii. Education,
 - iii. Health,
 - iv. Self-governance,
 - v. Human rights, and
 - vi. Environment.

Such a holistic development would contribute significantly towards the long-term structural poverty alleviation. RSN follows a participatory, bottom-up approach to the project planning, implementation and monitoring through the animation and formation of people's organizations.

- 7) Areas of Operations: RSN has been working since 1994 in the areas of community empowerment. It has worked with more than 2.2 million people and about 500 community-based organizations (CBOs) in 66 districts.
